

Cultural property on the path to restitution

With the release of the documentary film Dahomey, which follows France's restitution of twenty-six works of art to Benin, various research teams continue to work on the return of African cultural property to their communities of origin.